

Steve Adlich

Steve has held a number of technical and senior management positions in the Huntsville, AL Aerospace market for more than thirty years. He is currently President of Tyonek Manufacturing and Services business groups under the Tyonek Native Corporation.

In this role Steve has operational responsibility for all facets of the business. Steve has a proven executive management track record and extensive experience driving sales growth in the aerospace industry.

Over his career he has held engineering, technical management, business development and operations management roles developing a comprehensive knowledge of all facets of the DoD Aerospace market.

Prior to joining Tyonek, Steve worked for Lockheed Martin in Huntsville, AL supporting business development initiatives in the Unmanned Systems market. Steve has also held technical and technical leadership positions at both Northrop Grumman and Teledyne Technologies over his career supporting many aviation and missile systems development programs.

Steve earned a Bachelor of Science Degree in Engineering Physics from Murray State University in 1985. Steve is married to Sherry Adlich and has twin daughters.